PRESIDENTS REMARKS

Well, summer is knocking on our door and we're glad to see spring go out, but not with a fury. As most of you know, we were hit pretty hard by Mother Nature and I personally logged over 10" of rain on my deck! What that meant was many road closures, sand, pot holes, debris; you name it. The Northeast is still picking up the pieces and we need to be more careful on the roads because of that. I rode by some fissures this afternoon that would surely throw someone from their bike if they weren't paying attention. So, be observant and point those obstacles out...and don't forget the sunscreen!

AMERICA THE BEAUTIFUL (PART 2)

June 27

Dennis learns quickly-- I slept until 7:00 am!. It's great using university computers with their super fast connections, so I built a new more attractive Big Ride web page with the friendly help of tripod.Com.

June 28

2 days in Missoula is enough to tell me that this is a great little town--I could definitely live here. Free music in the park, great local brew, a bit of the 60's in the air, and white water!

June 29

Another day, another century ride, 101 miles to Avon, Montana. What a great day! It's easy riding when you finally get a tail wind. It makes me feel so strong! So it was a good day to have my first flat on the Big Ride.

June 30

Only 60 miles to Townsend, Montana... We crossed the continental divide early at McDonald Pass, for a rapid descent into Helena, Montana. It's a so-so town, nothing great. On the road we had to gather in groups to be escorted through a road construction project. Then the wind got a bit strong in our faces, making this 60 miles a lot harder than yesterday's century ride! Still, I made camp by about 1:30 pm after a break at the A&W. I've learned to set up my tent at the far end of the field, so that I can catch a little sleep and pee in the woods. My only neighbor out here in the nether region is Carol the Iron Woman, and she probably shares these sentiments.

July 1

Another climb, another pass, another head wind, and another day on the Big Ride. We did "check point" at White Sulfur Springs. The wind eased up, and the ride from there was spectacular. But it was hot out here in the desert, and I just had to go for a skinny dip in a beautiful blue lake along the way. Refreshed, I felt powerful, and the tailwind and I joined forces for a fast last few miles to camp. Then an ugly thunderstorm reared its head, and the trailing riders were actually blown backwards by the wind, blinded by rain, jolted by the lightning, and then (perhaps disappointedly) rescued a few miles from camp by the SAG vans. I laid on the air mattress in my tent, hoping that I could keep it from flying away and not be hit by a bolt from the sky. A family reunion in a restaurant next to our camping field in Harlowtown opened their doors to the riders to give us safe refuge from the storm! You should have seen the mix of these contrasting human beings, gathered together by the forces of nature!

July 2

A strong wind gave our pace line a great 21 mile per hour blast to the checkpoint by 8:30 am. We had Pie at Dori's Restaurant, then turned and headed into the wind with a 1000' climb up onto a desert plateau. I fell back from the pack on the hill, and rode along with John, the Catholic Priest. Here we encountered a great expanse of nothingness, and my energy eroded. I also couldn't keep up with Uli and Bob, a couple of 67 year olds. I had a Coke at a cowboy bar and grill, which was the only building in sight of anywhere, and I "bonked" on my way to Billings, Montana. Even the outstanding descent into this city surrounded by cliffs was made difficult by head winds. Sitting under a shade tree in Billings, a granola bar restored my energy and gave me enough energy to tackle the final insult, a short but incredibly steep ascent two blocks from the school yard where we will camp for the next two days.

July 3

Ahh, rest! We did laundry in the morning, and then hung out in town watching 10,000 motorcyclists converge on Billings. The Big Ride is not the big story in this town today!

Next month we begin with The Fourth of July!!!

Gordon Harris
